Salmon Burgers provide a tasty alternative to old-fashioned beef burgers along with the benefit of healthy omega-3 fats. These burgers have a refreshing appeal from the lemongrass and ginger. Top with traditional plant-based burger toppings on a hearty whole-grain roll. Tuna can be substituted for salmon as well. For those sensitive to spices, they can be toned down as needed. Yield: 4 Servings

INGREDIENTS:
- 1 lb. salmon fillet (or canned salmon)
- 3 cups bok choy, chopped finely (green leafy top only)
- 3 scallions, minced
- 1 Tbsp. finely grated ginger (peeled)
- 1 Tbsp. finely grated lemongrass (dried lemongrass can be substituted if fresh is not found)
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 large egg white
- 1 Tbsp. soy sauce
- Cilantro (optional)

DIRECTIONS:
1. Cut salmon into ¼ inch dice (or use canned salmon), stir into mixture of bok choy, scallions, ginger, lemongrass, salt and pepper in large bowl until combined.
2. Beat together egg white and soy sauce in a small bowl and stir into salmon mixture.
3. Form into four patties that are ½ inch thick.
4. Heat non-stick skillet over medium heat. Add 1 Tbsp. of olive oil to cover bottom of skillet. Add salmon patties, cooking for approximately 3-4 minutes per side.
5. Serve hot.
6. Top with cilantro leaves, if desired.
